On July 15, 1980, an individual known as [REDACTED] Officers Service Club, Washington, D.C. (WDC), contacted the Washington Field Office (WFO) regarding an individual known to him as [REDACTED] who currently resides at the Club. [REDACTED] believes [REDACTED] to be D.B. Cooper.

[REDACTED] described [REDACTED] as 45 to 50 years old, 5'11" to 6' tall, medium build, excellent physical condition and until recently wearing a beard. [REDACTED] advised [REDACTED] is an avid woodsman and a purported paratrooper. [REDACTED] keeps to himself and it is unknown where he goes each day, however, it is believed he is unemployed.

A photograph of several composite drawings was shown to [REDACTED] and revealed that the basic facial characteristics of [REDACTED] were likened to those of D.B. Cooper.

[REDACTED] advised that [REDACTED] has $900.00 per month wired to the D.C. National Bank, WDC, to the account of the Officers Service Club, of which $250.00 is deducted for his rent. The remaining $650.00 is cashed by [REDACTED] and given to [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] has indicated that [REDACTED] is afraid of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and has shown great interest in the recent discovery of $3,000.00 of the original D.B. Cooper money; found in the State of Washington.

[REDACTED] advised that [REDACTED] currently has a female companion living at the Officers Service Club in [REDACTED] known as [REDACTED]. He stated that [REDACTED] has paid her rent for the past two months.

[REDACTED] advised that [REDACTED] sits in the lounge each morning and reads a newspaper which he purchases between 7:00 a.m. and 9:00 a.m. daily.

Photographs of [redacted] four months prior to the hijacking, November 24, 1971, bear a striking resemblance to the composite drawing supplied by victims, who were aboard the hijacked Boeing 727.

[redacted] is described as 5' 11" to 6' tall, white hair, medium build, and until recently wearing a beard. [redacted] is in excellent physical condition and is an avid woodsmen and purported paratrooper.

b7C

[redacted] has applied for a passport for travel to the Netherlands. [redacted] passport was issued [redacted] from Passport Services, 1425 K Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. [redacted] originally attempted to secure this passport via fraudulent affidavit. Subsequently, [redacted] was instructed to produce further identification before a passport would be issued.

It is noted that [redacted] worked for Boeing Aircraft as a [redacted] until [redacted]. It is further noted that the Boeing 727 that was used in the hijacking was produced around 1965, and it is believed that [redacted] would have a working knowledge of the airplane and its rear entry/exit capabilities.

On August 8, 1980, an individual known as [REDACTED] Officer's Service Club, Washington, D.C. (WDC), contacted Special Agent (SA) [REDACTED] telephonically at the Washington Field Office (WFO) regarding an individual known to him as [REDACTED] who currently resides at the club. [REDACTED] has supplied information regarding his belief that [REDACTED] is identical to unsub, aka D.B. COOPER.

[redacted] advised that [redacted] intends to depart the United States as soon as possible to London on Pan American Airlines. He indicated that [redacted] stopped at his apartment and told him that he would be leaving the United States as soon as practically possible.

[redacted] advised that [redacted] reminded him that [redacted] rent is paid until September 15 and that although he is leaving the United States, he is not disappearing from the WDC area.

[redacted] indicated to [redacted] that his present [redacted] will look after his personal effects while he is overseas.

[redacted] advised that [redacted] does not want to handle his financial affairs through the Officer's Service Club in the future, therefore [redacted] asked [redacted] to write a letter indicating that [redacted] had lived at the Officer's Service Club since December, 1979 and established his bona fides as a tenant.

[redacted] advised that [redacted] was successful in opening his own savings account at the D.C. National Bank, WDC, and will be able to transfer money via wire on a secure, confidential basis.

Date of transcription 3/4/80

At approximately 5:30 p.m., on February 11, 1980, [REDACTED] Vancouver, Washington, telephonically contacted the below listed agent at the Portland FBI Office to advise that he had called 30 minutes earlier and had spoken to a girl in the office and had given her the serial numbers to some $20 bills that he had found, and asked her to check them to see if they were "hot". [REDACTED] was advised that the FBI is interested in the money and was asked if it was possible for him to bring the money into the office. He advised that he could and that he would appear at the Portland Office and bring the money at approximately 9:00 a.m. the following day, February 12, 1980.

Vancouver, Washington, telephone [redacted] telephonically contacted the below listed agent on February 13, 1980, to furnish the following information:

She was present with [redacted]

[redacted] Washington, b6 b7C

[redacted] on Sunday afternoon, February 10, 1980, when the ransom money from the "D. B. Cooper" skyjacking case was found. She stated that the accounts she had read of the finding of the money in the newspapers were slightly inaccurate and she stated that the actual finding went as follows:

[redacted]
 [redacted]

[redacted] was asked whether all of the money that was found had been turned in, and she asked what if it were not. The importance of turning in all of the money was explained to her and she stated that if there were any further money, she would attempt to obtain it and turn it in.

On February 14, 1980, [redacted] telephonically advised SA [redacted] that she desired to visit the FBI Office in Portland and bring in additional bills from the ransom. An appointment was made and subsequently [redacted] appeared at the Portland FBI Office and handed over an envelope containing four more of the bills bearing the following serial numbers:

 in Vancouver, Washington, where portions of $20 bills had been found. These $20 bills were among the money furnished a person identifying himself as D. B. COOPER during a 1971 airplane highjacking attempt. [redacted] was interviewed by SA [redacted] [redacted] of the Portland, Oregon, FBI Office.

b6
b7C

[redacted] advised that he found the beach area in the vicinity where the money was found to be in approximately four different layers. These layers consisted of an upper sand layer, a post dredging sand layer, a clay lump (dredge) sand layer, and below that an older sand layer. The upper layer consisted of six inches to eight inches of reworked beach sand and is the sand which contained the fragments and bundles of the recovered money. This sand also contained soda pop cans and other debris, which were not severely damaged or rusted. The post dredging sand contained older soda pop cans, rusted nails and spikes, and other rusted artifacts, which were in a much more deteriorated condition. The clay lump (dredge) sand was a mixture of coarse sand and fragments of organic clay material, ranging from one inch to five inches in size. Based on U.S. Corps of Engineering records which reflect that they dredged the Columbia River at this site in 1974, [redacted] stated this clay layer in all probability, was deposited during that 1974 dredging. The older sands, which were light in color and uniform in texture and which were found below the clay lump sand, were deposited prior to the 1974 dredging.

b6
b7C

[redacted] advised that in the post dredging layer, he found cross bedded coarse and medium sand, which indicated the river and river waves had worked repeatedly on this layer since 1974. The upper six inches to eight inches of reworked beach sand is the active layer which is currently being worked by the water of the Columbia River.

b6
b7C

Based on the condition of the money through observation, [redacted] advised that the money was probably washed into the location where it was found by natural river flow and was probably placed at the location of Tena Bar during the last rise in the Columbia River in the past two or three months.

On February 20, 1980, [redacted]
[redacted] U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, Portland District, telephone [redacted] was contacted regarding the possibility that bait money found near the [redacted] on February 10, 1980, could have been brought to that area by a river feeding the Columbia River from the north.

The area believed to be the drop zone of the subject in 1971, is described as that area in the State of Washington bounded on the north by the Lewis River, the east by the Clark County-Skamania County line, and the Columbia River.

[redacted] advised the only likely river feeding the Columbia River within the above described drop zone that would be capable of moving several bundles of money or a package about 16x16x4 inches to the Columbia River would be the Washougal River. A logical time, if the money came down the Washougal, would have been during the December 2, 1977 Washougal flood when parts of the river were approximately ten feet over the normal winter flood stage.

There are several other streams that feed the Columbia River upstream from the [redacted] however, due to size, or the degree of slope of the streams, it is unlikely that a small package would have made it to the Columbia. It is also unlikely that a small package would have passed through Lacamas Lake downstream to the Columbia.

[redacted] stated that based on the three feet per second speed of the Columbia River, if a small package entered the Columbia River at Washougal, Washington, and floated in the main stream of the river to the [redacted], a distance approximately thirty miles, it would take 14.7 hours. This is assuming that the package did not tumble along the bottom of the river or

Attached hereto is a Clark County Sheriff's Department Report prepared by [redacted]

[redacted] This report was received from the Clark County Sheriff's Office, Vancouver, Washington, on December 12, 1980.

A review of this report reveals that a portion of an orange and white parachute was found in the Lewis River between Heisson Bridge and Lucia Falls on December 8, 1980, by [redacted]

[redacted] Yacolt, Washington, telephone number [redacted]

Inasmuch as the description of the parachute found by [redacted] as contained in the attached report does not match the description of the parachutes utilized in captioned matter, it is recommended that no further action be taken concerning this.

On December 12, 1980, the [redacted] family, supra, was advised there was no need for them to hold the parachute remnant for the FBI and they could do with the remnant as they wished.

Eugene, Oregon.

Portland notes that the photograph of suspect, [redacted]
[redacted] was not accompanied by appropriate throw-down photo-

[redacted], makes a positive identification. In view of the fact that the photograph of [redacted] has been altered by the special in the artist's conception of D.B. COOPER, Portland would have no way of independently coming up with additional photographs which are similar in appearance so that the photograph of [redacted] is not unique.

Prior to the display of any witnesses in this matter, an appropriate photo spread should be developed to meet any legal challenge to any identifications which might result.

Portland has placed this case in an RUC status.

In geologist's opinion 'Cooper' money spent 8

By LESLIE L. ZAITZ
of The Oregonian staff

At least some of the cash from "Dan Cooper's" 1971 escapade has spent much of the past eight years under water and only recently was washed up on the Columbia River bank where it was found Sunday, according to a geologist assisting the FBI.

Leonard Palmer, a Portland State University geologist, reached that conclusion after examining the river bank nine miles northwest of Vancouver, Wash., where a family building a campfire found three packets of badly deteriorated $20 bills.

The FBI said the money, believed to be several thousand dollars, was part of the $200,000 ransom paid to a man known only as Dan Cooper. Cooper, popularly known as "D.B. Cooper" because of an erroneous news agency report at the time, received the money after hijacking a Northwest Airlines jetliner after it departed from Portland Nov. 24, 1971.

Palmer's research discounted an initial FBI theory that the cash had been deposited on the river bank during a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers channel dredging operation in 1974. Palmer said there were two other distinct layers of sand and sediment on top of the material dredged from the river.

The money was found in a layer of coarse sand ranging from several inches to 4 feet thick, Palmer said. He said the top layer of sand probably was deposited by wave action caused by passing ships.

Palmer said he believed the money found its way into the water not long after the hijacking, because it would have deteriorated within weeks if left exposed on the surface.

Palmer offered a theory for what happened, based on what little evidence exists and on geological information. It begins with Cooper parachuting from the Boeing 727 somewhere over Southwest Washington.

COOPER'S CASH — Portland State University geologist Leonard Palmer discusses probable history of $20 bills found Sunday on Vancouver, Wash., beach. The money, part of ransom paid to hijacker "Dan Cooper," washed ashore recently after spending about eight years in water, Palmer says.

Cooper may have landed in a wilderness alive and then decided to find a stream to follow out of the woods, Palmer speculated. He said the chance that Cooper landed in water was remote.

Once Cooper got to the water, something happened that caused him to become separated from at least part of the money, Palmer continued.

"He would not let go unless he was in trouble. He had gone through a lot of work to get that money," Palmer said. "But there were plenty of reasons for him to be in trouble."

Whatever the source of the trouble, the money entered the water.

"Up to that point, it's conjecture," Palmer said. "But once we have it in the water, we know what happened to it."

The bills spent the next nine years moving slowly downstream, probably getting caught at spots on the stream bottom, resting there a time and then becoming dislodged by river action.

The bills recovered Sunday were worn away in a rounding fashion and were matted together — evidence that the money had been in the water most of the time, Palmer explained.

Palmer said he believes the bills probably were washed up on the river bank within the last three to six months. The bills could have been there as long a year if they were well preserved in the water, he added.

The FBI sent the decomposed $20 bills Wednesday to its Washington, D.C., laboratory.

The FBI ultimately plans to return the money to its proper owner when it determines whether the owner is Northwest Airlines or Royal Globe Insurance Co. of New York, which covered the loss. The airline's offer of a $25,000 reward for return of the money has expired.

Charles Arnold, a spokesman for the U.S. Treasury Department in Washington, D.C., said the tattered bills would be replaced at face value if they were returned to the Treasury.

Responsibility for the Cooper investigation Thursday was returned to the FBI office in Seattle. Technically, the Seattle field office has been in charge of the hijacking investigation.

Jack Pringle, assistant special agent in charge of the Seattle office, said there was a chance that laboratory tests on the money "could find additional debris that might give us an idea where it may have been."

Preliminary results were not expected until next week.

The FBI has asked the Corps of Engineers to begin assessing streamflows of the Columbia and its tributaries in the Washougal River watershed.

Cooper mystery clue: Sarsparilla

By Jay McIntosh
The Daily News

Sioux City Sarsparilla, a potent root beerlike beverage in a can with a cowboy on it, is the latest clue in the muddled story of skyjacker D. B. Cooper.

Leonard Palmer, a Portland State University geologist, said today that two cans of the soft drink — along with a Nesbitt's Orange can — were found in the same sandy soil where a boy unearthed part of Cooper's loot last Sunday.

The clue may not mean much to FBI agents, who on Thursday called off their search there for more evidence. But it adds a Maltese Falcon air to the already mysterious story of America's only unsolved skyjacking.

Theories of what happened abound, and Palmer has constructed his own. He thinks Cooper survived his sky jump and was injured. Palmer winds a detective story around what he sees as geologic evidence of how the $3,000 or so came to be deposited on a Columbia River beach in Washington, three miles northwest of Vancouver.

A "Dan Cooper" parachuted from a 727 jet over Southwest Washington on Thanksgiving Eve 1971. But Palmer said the money was found in soil deposited on the beach after a 1974 dredging. It may have been deposited within the last year, he said.

"Sioux City Sarsparilla was lodged in the same level that the money was found," Palmer said. If the FBI can trace when the pop cans were manufactured, it could provide more evidence of when the money was deposited.

The cash, part of the $200,000 in $20 bills that was strapped to Cooper's waist, was found bundled in a bag.

The pop cans and most of the money were found six to eight inches below the surface, but fragments of the money reportedly were as far down as three feet.

Palmer could not explain how the money might have been buried that deep. He said there was "no conclusive evidence" that money was in fact found three feet down, and surmised that it may have been deposited there in digging actions.

Palmer said the money was worn the same way driftwood is worn. And the bills had not decayed as much as they would have if they had been exposed to air, he said.

"What that leads us to believe is that the money has been in the water all the time since it has been lost," he said.

Like the FBI searchers, Palmer dismisses the theory that the money may have washed upstream from the Lewis River. Authorities had Lewis River reservoir, but were rethinking that assumption after the discovery of the money.

Palmer said it looks like Cooper landed in the Washougal River drainage area. But after computing stream surface area, he said it was a 1,000-to-1 shot that the hijacker landed in water.

"It's likely that the guy survived (but was injured), got to a stream and dropped some of the money because he was hurt and couldn't hold onto it. So that leaves him injured and somewhere in the Washougal drainage area nine years ago."

Only educated guesswork is behind the theory, of course. The FBI may or may not search for more evidence, said Jack Pringle, assistant agent in charge of the bureau's Seattle office.

"We'll have to talk to the searchers who were down there and then we'll decide if any further searches will be undertaken," Pringle said this morning.

He didn't mention the Nesbitt's Orange or the Sioux City Sarsparilla. The Daily News managed to trace the sarsparilla to White Rock Products Inc., a soft drink manufacturer in Brooklyn, N.Y. Company spokesman John Cloney said he didn't think the beverage had ever been distributed on the West Coast north of California.

A woman at the Portland bottler of White Rock beverages said she had "never heard of it."

THE CRIME

On November 24, 1971, a lone white male boarded Northwest Orient Flight No. 305 at Portland, Oregon. At approximately 3:22 p.m., while the flight was en route to Seattle, Washington, he indicated to the stewardess that his briefcase contained a bomb which would blow up the plane unless his demands were met.

The hijacker demanded $200,000 and four (4) parachutes in exchange for the safety of the 36 passengers aboard the plane. When the aircraft landed at Seattle, Washington, Northwest Orient Airlines complied with his instructions. After he received the parachutes and the money, the hijacker allowed all passengers and two airline stewardesses to deplane.

He then ordered the remaining crew members into the first-class section of the aircraft and informed them he desired to fly to Mexico City. The hijacker instructed that the plane proceed in a southerly direction and fly at a low altitude and slow speed which would enable the rear door of the plane (Boeing 727) to be opened during the flight.

The hijacker apparently bailed out somewhere between Seattle, Washington, and Reno, Nevada, where the plane landed to refuel. It was determined the hijacker, two parachutes and the ransom money had disappeared when the plane was inspected at Reno, Nevada.

Artist conception drawings of the aircraft hijacker were prepared by the FBI Exhibit Section and are considered a reasonable likeness. The black and white composites were prepared initially and sometime later the color composites were prepared to depict the hijacker's complexion and age more graphically.

The hijacker is described as follows:

Race:	White
Sex:	Male
Age:	Mid-40's
Height:	5'10" to 6'
Weight:	170 to 180 pounds
Complexion:	Olive, Latin appearance, medium smooth.
Hair:	Dark brown or black, parted on the left, combed back.
Eyes:	Possibly brown; during latter part of flight, the hijacker put on dark wrap-around sunglasses with dark rims.
Voice:	Low, spoke intelligently, no particular accent.
Characteristics:	Smoked Raleigh filters type cigarettes
Wearing Apparel:	Black or brown suit; narrow black tie (clip on type); black rain-type overcoat or dark top coat; dark briefcase or attache case; carried a paper bag - 4 x 12 x 14 inches; brown shoes.
Remarks:	Very polite at all times.

The enclosed letter and photograph were received at the Bureau and forwarded to Seattle, being received at Seattle on May 12, 1981.

Dear Mr. Baker:

We have become aware that some of the money given to D. B. Cooper has been recovered. This letter is to advise you that our client, Globe Indemnity Company, reimbursed Northwest Airlines for the money which was given to D. B. Cooper. It is our opinion, based on the terms of the contract pursuant to which such indemnification was made, that Globe Indemnity is entitled to receive any recovery made until the full amount of indemnification has been repaid.

We would appreciate being kept advised of what recovery is or has been made.

RE: DR. JAMES A. ROMAN(deceased)

On 8/18/81, William Closner, Sheriff, Skamania County Sheriff's Office, Stevenson, Washington, advised Dr. James A. Roman, Date of Birth 10/9/27, shot his wife and killed himself on 2/3/80 after allegedly assaulting an individual in Portland, Oregon. He said his office investigated the homicide/suicide and while doing so, discovered the Roman residence was filled with numerous weapons. He stated that also found were scanners capable of monitoring numerous police frequencies. Sheriff Closner stated Roman was either a paratrooper or did some sky-diving, was a previous employee of NASA, and apparently continued to have some interest in parachuting. He said the Roman residence, located at Milepost 0.56R Strunk Road, Washougal, Washington, was in the flightpath of the aircraft carrying D.B. Cooper. He said that based on the above stated facts it appears as if Roman should be looked at by the FBI as a possible D.B. Cooper suspect.

Sheriff Closner said he was not aware of Roman's description or further identifying data. He said [redacted]

[redacted] Office of Special Investigations, Region 6 Field Office, Department of Social and Health Services, 500 West Eighth, Vancouver, Washington, provided the following information:

He is a [redacted] and, as such, did some [redacted] at the time, to Dr. James Roman. Subsequently, Roman [redacted]

In January or February of 1980, he received a telephone call from [redacted] indicating that she had heard Dr. Roman went to Portland and shot someone. He, [redacted] subsequently determined that Roman had killed his new wife and committed suicide at his home in Washougal, Washington. He, [redacted] went to the Roman home in Washougal, which is located in Skamania County, and secured the home, because he was asked to do so.

While securing the residence, he conducted a thorough search and found numerous items he felt might be of interest to the FBI. He found a toolbox in the barn, which was dirty and rusty. Underneath numerous tools, he found two timing devices that could be utilized with batteries. He further found, buried in the dirt floor of the barn, a container with a box that said, "Silencer" on it. The box was empty. He found a police scanner in Roman's wife's purse, which had frequencies for the Portland Police Bureau, the Clark County Sheriff's Office and the Skamania County Sheriff's Office. He discovered two lock-picking kits in the residence, along with dynamite, blasting caps and plastic explosives.

Other items he discovered included a Xerox machine, a printing press with many different types of type and numerous documents that appeared to him to be "phony." He felt these documents were not authentic, inasmuch as there were numerous of them, indicating they were such things as college certificates.

He also found a large quantity of camera equipment, including a dark room.

He discovered numerous documents from hospitals, alleging Dr. Roman erred in his surgical procedures. One of these documents indicated that Dr. Roman, after performing a kidney operation on a woman, accidentally cut off the woman's breast.

He further found 30 or more apple boxes, containing books, which indicated they had been taken from various libraries. These books had to do with stories on Hitler, medical books, spy stories and other topics.

He has learned that Dr. Roman was apparently the first doctor to become an astronaut and has found documents which indicate Roman was a jet pilot. In amongst the items indicating Roman was in the United States Air Force, were items marked, "Top Secret." These items, he recalls, also had the stamp of "Declassified" on them.

The majority of the items that he found in the home were provided to the lawyer for the estate for subsequent dispersement to the appropriate relatives.

He is bringing this matter to the attention of the FBI, inasmuch as the whole situation appears to be extremely bizarre to him. While he is in no way certain this matter is involved with the D. B. Cooper matter, it is interesting to note that Dr. Roman was a jet pilot, was apparently knowledgeable of airplanes and resided in an area adjacent to the flight path of Cooper's plane.

[REDACTED] STATED THAT HE IS AWARE THAT SOMEONE HAS MADE

BT 164A-26, PAGE FOUR, UNCLAS

A DEPOSIT FOR PURCHASE OF THE PROPERTY OF [REDACTED] BUT THAT THERE DOES NOT APPEAR TO BE AN IMMEDIATE SALE AND HE BELIEVED THAT EVEN IF THE PROPERTY SHOULD BECOME SOLD, [REDACTED]
WOULD PROBABLY CONTINUE TO RESIDE IN THE SAME GENERAL AREA.

[REDACTED] ADVISED THAT HE WOULD CONTINUE TO MAKE PERIODIC CONTACTS WITH [REDACTED] FOR THE PURPOSE OF ESTABLISHING GREATER RAPPORT WITH HIM. [REDACTED] ADVISED HE WOULD NOT SPECIFICALLY ENGAGE IN CONVERSATION REGARDING [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] ADVISED THAT [REDACTED], ALBERTA, CANADA, IS APPROXIMATELY [REDACTED] OF GREAT FALLS, MONTANA, AND IT IS A [REDACTED] OF CALGARY, ALBERTA, CANADA. IT IS [REDACTED] OF RED DEER. HE ADVISED THAT THERE IS NO COMMERCIAL AIRPORT AT [REDACTED] HOWEVER,
HE STATED THAT THERE IS A GOOD PAVED RUNWAY WHICH WOULD ACCOMMO-DATE EVEN A FAIR-SIZED TWIN-ENGINE AIRCRAFT IN THE EVENT THAT INVESTIGATORS MAY WISH TO FLY INTO THE AREA FOR THE PURPOSE OF INTERVIEWING [REDACTED]

THE BUREAU IS REQUESTED TO FURNISHED THE ABOVE INFORMATION

The following investigation was conducted by SA [redacted]

b6

AT SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

On June 26, 1981, [redacted] (protect),
the [redacted] San Francisco, California, telephone number [redacted] [redacted], was contacted, in his office, regarding a listed former employee by the name of [redacted]

b6
b7C
b7D

It is noted that a [redacted] has been reported as a missing person by his parents and has not been seen or heard from, by his parents nor his wife, since his honorable discharge from the U.S. Military Service in [redacted]. Their attempts to locate him to determine whether he is dead or alive have been unsuccessful to date. Numerous private investigators have been retained with no results, and their correspondence with various governmental agencies most recently determined that a [redacted] with the same spelling was listed as having been employed by the [redacted]
[redacted] San Francisco, California, during the year of 1979.

b6
b7C

A letter from [redacted] father to Senator
Allan Cranston of San Francisco expressed a plea for assistance in locating their long missing son. They explained in their letter that they feared that someone may have taken their son's name and identity and that possibly their son [redacted] had met with foul play after his discharge from the Military.

b6
b7C

[redacted] was apprised of this situation and was shown a photograph of the real

Living with a Legend

by SA Billy Bob Williams

Webster's New World Dictionary includes, among its thousands of word definitions, many words which are of opposite meaning. The dictionary defines immortality as "lasting fame." It defines anonymity as "the quality or state of being anonymous (as through absence or lack of identity)." Throughout history, numerous criminal personalities have been described by one or the other of these words, but few, such as "Jack the Ripper," qualified for both titles.

One such individual stepped through the door of a Boeing 727 on a stormy Thanksgiving eve in 1971. At the time the plane was 10,000 feet over southern Washington state, and the middle-aged man took with him $200,000 in cash. Possibly the first successful parachute hijacking of an American airliner had occurred, and the name D. B. Cooper would become a household word in the Pacific Northwest and known throughout the world.

The hijack took place shortly after Northwest Airlines Flight 305 departed the Portland, Oregon, International Airport en route to the Seattle-Tacoma Airport. A man, later found listed on the manifest as Dan Cooper, threatened a stewardess with what he claimed was a bomb. The plane landed at "Sea-Tac" where his demand for $200,000 and four parachutes was complied with. The passengers and several members of the crew were allowed to leave the plane, and at 7:46 p.m. the plane left "Sea-Tac" and flew toward Reno, Nevada. A short time later the hijacker, left alone in the cabin, is believed to have jumped, without boots, helmet, or protective clothing, into some of the roughest terrain on the North American Continent. On the night of his jump, the weather could only be described as vicious. Despite many hours of ground search and additional hundreds of hours of investigation, the man has neither been found nor identified.

Dan Cooper, whose origin was never established, became D. B. Cooper when members of the news media overheard law enforcement officers discussing a possible suspect with that name. The name was published and has become a part of the legend.

The area into which Cooper fell is approximately 25 miles north of Portland, Oregon. Part of the estimated 150 square miles of drop zone is now included in the red zone, or dangerous area, surrounding the country's newest volcano, Mt. St. Helens. The entire crime took place within the jurisdiction of the Seattle FBI Office, but because of its proximity to Portland, the media and the public frequently associate the Portland Office with the investigation. A closely coordinated investigative effort has been maintained between the two offices throughout the years with an occasional sprinkling of rivalry thrown in when it appeared a significant lead might be developing.

There has been only one real lead; that surfaced in 1980 when an eight-year-old boy found almost $6,000 of the ransom money on the banks of the Columbia River near Vancouver, Washington. The only result of the find was a reinforcement of the belief that Cooper probably died the night of the jump.

The legend now makes Cooper a folk hero in the mountains of southern Washington, but in considering the matter, one should remember that Cooper's apparent success laid the foundation for the several hundred hijackings which have occurred in the past nine years.

Although Cooper has never been identified, he is never far from the minds of all modern air travelers. In most of the airports in the world, boarding passengers must pass through some type of security system. Usually this is little more than an inconvenience, but for anyone who has been aboard a hijacked flight, or participated in efforts to free those aboard such a flight, the experience has included varying degrees of frustration and terror.

The FBI and other law enforcement agencies around the world have lived with Cooper's legend on a daily basis since 1971. New techniques to enter planes and make rescues have been developed, profiles of potential hijackers formulated, communication networks strengthened, and hostage negotiators trained in an effort to insure the safety of the air traveler. Every operation has its share of problems, but when the call goes out in an FBI office that a hijacking is in progress, you will soon see the very best effort each and every employee can put forth. The satisfaction derived from participating in a successful recovery of hostages and apprehension of their tormentor is one that is seldom equaled.

For the personnel of the Seattle and Portland Offices, the legend lives on in the form of one of the longest, continuous criminal investigations in the history of the FBI.

AT SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

On June 26, 1981, [redacted] (protect),
the [redacted] San Francisco, California, telephone number [redacted]

employee by the name of [redacted]

b6

b7D

It is noted that a [redacted] has been reported as a missing person by his parents and has not been seen or heard from, by his parents nor his wife, since his honorable discharge from the U.S. Military Service in [redacted]. Their attempts to locate him to determine whether he is dead or alive have been unsuccessful to date. Numerous private investigators have been retained with no results, and their correspondence with various governmental agencies most recently determined that a [redacted] with the same spelling was listed as having been employed by the [redacted]
[redacted] San Francisco, California, during the year
of 1979.

b6
b7C

A letter from [redacted] father to Senator
Allan Cranston of San Francisco expressed a plea for assistance in locating their long missing son. They explained in their letter that they feared that someone may have taken their son's name and identity and that possibly their son [redacted] had met with foul play after his discharge from the Military.

To : SAC, SEATTLE (164-81)

Date 9/25/81

Wm Pef

From : SAC, SAN FRANCISCO (164-220) (RUC) (SQ. 10)

Subject : NORJAK

OO: Seattle

Enclosed for Seattle Division are: two photographs of suspect [REDACTED] (photo taken approximately [REDACTED] Venice, Austria); two Xerox copies of [REDACTED] U.S. Army fingerprint card dated [REDACTED]; two investigative inserts reflecting investigation into the missing person status of [REDACTED] one Xerox copy of D.B. Cooper's composite drawing contained in San Francisco file dated 1973; and one Xerox copy of an article with composite drawing of Cooper, taken from June 1981 issue of "The Investigator".

b6
b7C

For the information of Seattle, this communication and enclosures are being submitted reflecting [REDACTED] as a possible suspect, whose photograph strongly resembles that of the composite drawings of Unsub, aka D.B. Cooper, perpetrator of captioned hijacking on 11/24/71.

b6
b7C

The circumstances surrounding [REDACTED] disappearance following his honorable discharge from the U.S. Army on [REDACTED] from Fort Lewis, Washington, and his apparent disassociation from his parents, friends, and former associates; the fact that he has not been heard from since his discharge, the fact that his apparent voluntary "social dropout" status occurred shortly prior to the captioned hijacking, prompted the San Francisco Case Agent to submit this communication offering him as a possible suspect inasmuch as D.B. Cooper's true identity has not yet been established.

b6
b7C

The following background information reflects the San Francisco Division's predication to conduct preliminary inquiries into the missing person status of [REDACTED] carried under San Francisco file number [REDACTED], is being furnished for Seattle's [REDACTED] information:

In March, 1981, U.S. Senator Allen Cranston received a letter dated [redacted] from [redacted] Pacoima, California, who, in essence, were pleading for assistance in locating their only son, [redacted] who last corresponded with them from Viet Nam in [redacted] while he was serving in the U.S. Army Engineer Corps.

[redacted] through inquiries of [redacted] [redacted] in Fort Lewis, Washington, in 1972, determined [redacted] was discharged from the Fort Lewis Army Camp on [redacted] with a considerable amount of money and that he had never reached his forwarding address provided by him upon his departure.

Since [redacted] discharge, his parents, friends, and former associates have never received any correspondence nor have they, through exhaustive investigations by private detective agencies and assistance from other government agencies, been able to determine his whereabouts for the last ten years.

Senator Cranston furnished a copy of the [redacted] letter to the San Francisco Office requesting assistance, conveying the subject's parents' speculation that their son may have met with foul play following his discharge from the Army and that someone, other than their son, was using his Social Security card obtaining employment in the U.S. since 1971. Senator Cranston requested the San Francisco Division to attempt to determine if [redacted] was dead or alive.

In May, 1981, San Francisco received a copy of [redacted] U.S. Army fingerprint card and his FBI criminal history record of identification. A copy of these documents have been enclosed should the Seattle Office desire the Identification Division, Fingerprint Section, to conduct a comparison against any latent fingerprints of unknown subject, aka D.B. Cooper.

San Francisco initiated a preliminary investigation resulting in the determination that a [redacted] Social Security Account number [redacted] was known to have been employed with the [redacted] San Francisco, California, during the year of 1979.

Contact with officials of this organization determined that a [redacted] found to be identical, did in fact reside at the [redacted] and [redacted] during the period of 2/23/78 until 8/17/79.

[redacted] provided background information on [redacted] (as indicated in enclosed insert), stating that [redacted] came to their [redacted] and stayed in the dormitory. He [redacted]

b7C
b7D

[redacted] On 8/17/79, [redacted] was to report to a farm project, but failed to show up and has not been seen since that date. No forwarding address was given by him and his whereabouts is unknown.

San Francisco responded to the Senator and [redacted] parents explaining that he was still alive in August, 1979, however, further pursuit of this investigation was discontinued due to his adulthood, his rights under the Privacy Act, and that no federal jurisdiction existed. His whereabouts at this point is unknown by the San Francisco Division.

b7C

San Francisco's reasons for submitting [redacted] as a possible suspect is a correlation of [redacted] background and unknown circumstances surrounding his disappearance with that of the psychological profile contained in Seattle's investigative report, dated 5/30/73. Listed below are some of the enumerated reasons for submitting this communication to the Seattle Division:

b6
b7C

1. [redacted] photograph, taken in [redacted] Venice, Austria, bears a strong resemblance to composite drawings of D.B. Cooper; i.e., facial features, hair and parting of the hair, etc., with the exception of the difference of his nose shape.

b6
b7C

2. [redacted] mysterious disappearance from the area of Fort Lewis, Washington, on [redacted] just prior to the hijacking of the airplane on 11/24/71.

b6
b7C

3. [redacted] military service may have afforded him some familiarization with airplanes and parachute jumping even though he was assigned to the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

b6
b7C

SF 164-220
RLS/klb

4. Unsub - D.B. Cooper made statements to the airline stewardesses explaining why he hijacked the plane, i.e., "It's not because I have a grudge against the airlines, it's because I have a grudge." [redacted] apparently disassociated himself from his parents due to intolerable home environment explaining to [redacted] that he always wanted to run away since childhood (see investigative insert).

5. [redacted] suit, narrow tie, and small collar points, (in photo) shows to be a conservative as described in Seattle's investigative report as that worn by Unsub, D.B. Cooper.

6. [redacted] background in military as a [redacted] [redacted] and apparent trade skills may be compared with ingenuity of Unsub, D.B. Cooper's use of a knife to prepare a knapsack containing the extorted money, tying it to the parachute lines prior to jumping from the plane.

7. [redacted] may have been familiar with military bases as compared to Cooper's statements to airline stewardesses as they passed over those areas.

It is noted the difference in estimated age of Unsub, D.B. Cooper, by witnesses and what age [redacted] would have been in 1971 is recognized by the San Francisco Division, however, [redacted] in the enclosed photograph appears older than his age.

The background information and descriptive data of [redacted] was obtained from enclosed fingerprint card, investigation, and information provided by parents in their referenced letter which is contained in San Francisco's file:

NORJAK;
CRIME ABOARD AIRCRAFT -
HIJACK

On November 24, 1971, a lone white male boarded Northwest Orient Flight #305 at Portland, Oregon. At approximately 3:22 PM while the flight was en route to Seattle, Washington, he indicated to the stewardess that his briefcase contained a bomb which would blow up the plane unless his demands were met.

The hijacker demanded $200,000 and four parachutes in exchange for the safety of the 36 passengers aboard the plane. When the aircraft landed at Seattle, Washington, Northwest Orient Airlines complied with his instructions. After he received the parachutes and the money, the hijacker allowed all passengers and two airline stewardesses to deplane.

He then ordered the remaining crew members into the first-class section of the aircraft and informed them he desired to fly to Mexico City. The hijacker instructed that the plane proceed in a southerly direction and fly at a low altitude and slow speed which would enable the rear door of the plane (Boeing 727) to be opened during the flight.

The hijacker apparently bailed out somewhere between Seattle, Washington, and Reno, Nevada, where the plane landed to refuel. It was determined the hijacker, two parachutes, and the ransom money had disappeared when the plane was inspected at Reno, Nevada.

Artist conception drawings of the aircraft hijacker were prepared by the Federal Bureau of Investigation Exhibit Section and are considered a reasonable likeness. The black and white composites were prepared initially, and some time later the color composites were prepared to depict the hijacker's complexion and age more graphically.

Pursuing Cooper

Believe the former FBI agent, not new movie

By BILL DIETRICH

The Columbian

"Enjoyable juvenile escapism."

That is the reaction the new "Pursuit of D.B. Cooper" movie drew Friday from the FBI agent who pursued Cooper the longest: Ralph Himmelsbach of West Linn, Ore.

The movie begins where the known facts end about America's most famous skyjacker, the only one never caught. The film follows its fictional Cooper as he flees across the western United States towards Mexico with a pretty girl and the $200,000 extorted from the airline.

Himmelsbach, who is writing a book on the case, speculates Cooper was probably an ex-con no one missed when he disappeared and whose bones lie somewhere in the Washougal River basin.

The Columbian took the retired agent, now 56, to the film to get his reaction. From the opening moments, the film left the 28-year FBI veteran shaking his head.

The film shows Cooper, played by Treat Williams, bailing out of a "Northern Pacific" jetliner on Nov. 24, 1971, under clear, sunny skies, landing near cached survival equipment (including a jeep) in a pine forest.

DB Cooper-18990

In reality, said Himmelsbach, Cooper jumped from a Northwest 727 into a pitch-black November storm, with an estimated chill factor of 69 degrees below zero.

No matter. "The Pursuit of D.B. Cooper" is a popcorn film: light-weight, empty, but fun. Its one real concession to the facts is to show the star tossing a packet of $20 bills into a stream. There is no discernible reason, except to jibe with the 1980 discovery of Cooper money on a Columbia River beach by Vancouver's 8-year-old Brian Ingram.

Himmelsbach's recounting of the truth remains more interesting. The unsolved case, he estimated, cost more to investigate than the original $200,000 ransom. The case made Cooper a folk hero, and stimulated the subsequent wave of skyjackings. They resulted in airport security procedures the public is still paying for.

The case has plenty of irony, not the least of which is that D.B. Cooper was "found" the night of the hijacking.

Himmelsbach explained that after "Dan Cooper" bought a ticket for the flight at Portland International Airport, the FBI ordered a search of local directories for such a man. They turned up a bewildered D.B. Cooper who was found at home, unaware a skyjacking was going on.

An Associated Press reporter mistakenly thought this routine check meant the culprit's true initials were D.B. The mistake was retracted the next day, but "D.B." had a poetry Dan lacked. The name stuck.

Himmelsbach took charge of the case in Portland, unsuccessfully tried that night to follow the lumbering airliner in the storm by helicopter, then criss-crossed the Ariel vicinity by light plane the following day, Thanksgiving. Cooper was not found — not then, or in the nearly nine subsequent years Himmelsbach worked on and off the case before his retirement in 1980.

So who was D.B. Cooper, and what happened to him? Here are Himmelsbach's speculations:

• Cooper was likely an ex-con; first, because he had the ruthlessness to terrify 42 passengers and demand $200,000, and second, because he was so unloved that no one inquired about his disappearance. Authorities exhaustively searched missing person reports, prison records, etc., without success.

• He may have been from the Tacoma area. He had no foreign accent, and remarked to a stewardess that he could recognize Tacoma from the air. He specifically asked for parachutes from nearby McChord Air Force Base, showing some familiarity with the area.

• Cooper was an amateur skydiver. He asked for four parachutes, but cut the cords from the one easiest to use, presumably to tie the 21-pound canvas sack of money around his waist. A second chute was ignored. The two that disappeared included a small, hard-to-control emergency chute for acrobatic pilots, and a chute used to train Air Force chute packers. Unknown to authorities when it was given to Cooper, the panels on that last chute were sewn together and would not open.

• Cooper had no known navigational instruments, no known food or water, and jumped wearing a business suit and loafer shoes. He had no gloves, no goggles, no helmet, no boots. If a chute deployed, its normal speed plus high winds would have sent him into the ground at 50 mph.

• Cooper could not have been planning to jump to a cached set of survival gear. He asked to go to several cities — all requiring different air routes — before agreeing Reno was as far as the plane could go with its fuel.

• Although the pilot's best estimate put Cooper's bailout in the vicinity of Ariel, Himmelsbach thinks Cooper died in the Washougal River basin. The money found on the shores of the Columbia River could not have been washed upstream from the mouth of the Lewis River, the agent said. The next nearest major watershed above the famous beach is the Washougal.

Himmelsbach thinks Cooper landed, walked or crawled to a stream for water, died of injuries or exposure, and lay undisturbed all winter. Spring floods washed some of the money down the Washougal to the Columbia River, and it floated down the Columbia to be discovered eight years later.

Regrets? Few. Himmelsbach said the case was his most interesting.

"I don't feel he got away with it," he said. "I'm comfortable. I sleep at nights."

Besides a possible book contract, the case has also brought Himmelsbach national publicity. He is tentatively scheduled to appear Monday on Good Morning America.

The money? Except for the Ingram discovery, not a bill of it has turned up, either here or overseas.

Cooper? Himmelsbach presented the facts to a grand jury five years after the Cooper caper, when the statute of limitations would have run out. The resulting indictment means Cooper could still go to prison, if caught.

Enclosed for Philadelphia and Seattle are two copies each of an envelope and a letter signed D. B. Cooper.

For information of Philadelphia, shortly after 3:00 p.m. Pacific Standard Time, 11/24/71, a lone white male traveling from Portland, Oregon, to Seattle, Washington, on Flight 305, Northwest Orient Airlines, displayed the contents of his brief case to a stewardess on the plane indicating to her it was a bomb and that it would be exploded unless his demands were met. The hijacker indicated his willingness to exchange the safety of the passengers for $200,000 and four parachutes. Northwest Orient Airlines complied with the hijacker's instructions and once the money and parachutes were loaded on the plane and it was being refueled, he allowed the 36 passengers aboard and two airline stewardesses to deplane. The hijacker indicated a desire to fly to Mexico City and instructed the plane take off in a southerly direction, fly at a low altitude and slow speed, and that the lower rear door in the plane be opened during flight. All of the hijacker's demands were met and all members of the crew remained in the pilot's cabin as the hijacker had ordered. When the flight landed at Reno, Nevada, for refueling, it was determined that the hijacker, two parachutes and the ransom money had disappeared.

An intensive investigation was instituted with negative results.

The hijacker was first identified as D. B. Cooper, but a later check of the passenger manifest showed the name he used in buying a ticket with cash was Dan Cooper. His actual identity never has been confirmed.

The enclosed letter is being furnished to receiving offices for possible future lead purposes.

Lookout

D.B. Cooper in Cambridge

by Ken Lizotte

The news media in this town ain't so special, nor are the F.B.I., anywhere. They've been tracking down D.B. Cooper for years, since 1971 in fact, and looking for the $200 G's he obtained in ransom from an airline hijacking, a feat of no minuscule proportion considering he escaped — yes, ESCAPED! — by parachuting into the Southern California countryside. The one that did it, AND GOT AWAY, that's Daniel B. Cooper.

Legend has it, however, that Cooper dropped the money, either in part or all, as he floated to earth, and that twenty-dollar bills were thus deposited throughout the towns and villages in his landing area. Yet, strangely, none of the money, not one buck!, was ever found, and even more strange, every year, on the anniversary of his escape, the towns and villages in that area throw a "D.B. Cooper Celebration" to honor him for, well, for something! They appreciate him, though one can only speculate as to why, and there seems to be a genuine hope that the feds never catch him, wherever he may be.

And could that "wherever" be, or have been, Cambridge? According to a most reliable source of mine, a D.B. Cooper lived near Central Square during the winter months of 1978. His name was clearly displayed on a mailbox and correspondence to and from him was regularly delivered. Was this the same D.B.

corresponded with many well-known public officials, including Arthur F. Burns, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Bob Bergland, Secretary of Agriculture, Benjamin E. Balter, Postmaster General of the United States, our own Mel Thomson of New Hampshire, and a Dr. Red Metrowich, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Southern Africa Freedom Foundation. Apparently, Cooper wrote to Metrowich asking about getting out of the country and escaping to South Africa. His initial contact, however, had been with Thomson, who had directed him to Metrowich. Was Thomson collaborating with hijacker Cooper to help him get out of the country? Or was Thomson unaware that a hijacker seven years earlier had been named D.B. Cooper? Whatever the answer, did Thomson, or any of the others report this correspondence to the FBI as any good law-abiding American should? A check with both the Bureau and offices of these gentlemen reveals they did not.

Where are you now, Alan Lupo? The Globe Spotlight Team? Mark Zanger? Peter Lucas? All the other great investigative minds of Boston journalism? Was D.B. Cooper, the hijacker-that-got-away, right here in the Boston area for a year or more? Is he now in South Africa? How can the FBI take so much credit for finding "bits of twenty dollar bills," as they did this month, when Cooper may not even be in the country any longer? After all, it's been nine years, and those bits they found in the California mud are the most they've got to show for the years and talent poured into this maddening mailbank.

It would seem, then, that if Abbie Hoffman wants to truly remain at large, the thing to do is change his name back to just that: Abbie Hoffman. No one would ever suspect that a fugitive would keep his true name. This obviously has been the case with D.B. Cooper. ☐

Lookout D.B. Cooper Was Here

by Ken Lizotte

I have been passed more evidence that D.B. Cooper, the 1971 hijacker who escaped with $200,000 somewhere over the Southern California countryside, actually surfaced—at least briefly—in Cambridge. Cooper has been eluding the F.B.I. rather successfully all through the seventies, but my source (let's call him, The Lurk) claims that a D.B. Cooper lived in the Boston area from 1977 to at least late 1978. He also maintains that prominent U.S. officials knew this but did not report it to the Bureau. The Lurk also says that former New Hampshire Governor Mel Thomson gave information to Cooper concerning the possibility of transmigration to South Africa. The question, then, is what this the D.B. Cooper, and, whoever it was, who did Governor Thomson think it was?

Also, who did Arthur F. Burns, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, think he was communicating with when he received a letter from a D.B. Cooper dated December 30, 1977? This letter is noteworthy, since Cooper indicates that if Burns is interested, Cooper might actually send him some Money. Why? Surely, Burns has enough of his own, and yet, here was a D.B. Cooper (!) offering money to the outgoing chairman of the F.R.B.! One can only surmise how much and for what reason, and in any case, why, like Thomson, did Burns say nothing about the matter to law enforcement officials?

The Lurk has offered this portion of the letter as evidence: "I've been watching you work very closely all the years you've been head of the Fed, and I think you've done a great job. Better than I could do, that's for sure. I mean, it ain't easy keeping money from getting out to the people the way you have... somebody's got to keep money from falling into the wrong hands... I will most regret you having your job because I will not be able to hear of you anymore. Maybe they'll write a story about you in People! I hope so, because I would miss not being able to read about what you've been doing with yourself. Whatever happens, be active. Don't let the economy get you down, it's not your worry anymore."

Huh? This is an outlaw speaking? Is this on the level or what? The Lurk says it is, but offers no explanation. Why then would D.B. Cooper, the outlaw, communicate with Arthur F. Burns for his work with the F.R.B.? Could this be coded? Does Cooper know what he's talking about when he writes, "It ain't easy keeping money from falling into the wrong hands?" The F.B.I. has certainly been wringing its own hands as it's scoured high and low for the two hundred plus from Cooper's hijacking ransom.

The kicker here is that later in the letter, Cooper offers Burns a loan! "I could send you a few bucks," he says. "Nothing's too good for a pal like you AND FOR ALL YOU'LL DONE!" (Emphasis mine!) The letter ends: "I wouldn't charge as much interest as the banks do, so don't worry about that part! Please contact me if I can help. I'M ALWAYS AROUND." (Emphasis, once again, my own!)

Most importantly, however, there is a reply from Burns, dated January 6, 1978, on F.R.B. stationery and addressed to D.B. Cooper, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Unless The Lurk has somehow stolen F.R.B. letterheads, Arthur Burns must have a copy of this reply somewhere in his own files! Does the Bureau know this? Again, why didn't Burns report these communiqués in the first place?

The reply is terse, even perplexing: "It was good of you to write me so graciously. I deeply appreciate your kind thoughts." That's it! Maybe Burns is merely simple, maybe it never crossed his mind that this might be the same D.B. Cooper.

But how, really, do any of us know for certain that it was not?

it has been ten years since i took the plunge from flight 305. i never planned on contact but the feeling is probably mutual. while i obviously did not overestimate my abilities, i have underestimated public reaction to the event. instead of a dim memory it seems that the mythmakers have been hard at work. first the cult-following, then articles and books, and now a movie. none of which ever broke my silence. but now comes a million dollar reward! perhaps turning myself in would be a wise and profitable decision. i propose that i give myself up if the following conditions are met: i must have assurances that my surrender will qualify for the reward; to that effect i want a joint legal opinion and agreement by the justice department and universal. i will return the money to northwest if they agree to refrain from all future legal proceedings against me; i will plead guilty to a one year punishable misdemeanor to be served at a minimum federal facility; to that effect i want an agreement signed by the attorney general. if this can be done in time i will surrender to the director of the fbi personally on november 24. act quickly, i believe this to be in everyone's best interests, even universal; a million will be a small amount for the unlimited press coverage and curiosity. think it over if you agree, place a notice in the new york times' personal column reading "come home d.b., all is forgiven" on november 13/85. i will then recontact over specifics. p.s. i would like to offer belated thanks to captain scott and [redacted] for their cool conduct at the time....

Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir,

Several years ago a man hijacked a plane, parachuted out with some money and was never heard of again. His name was listed as D. B. Cooper.

I recall that some of the money was found and that now he is presumed to be dead.

My reason for writing this letter--I hope that you will not think me foolish--is that several weeks ago I had a dream about this. Actually, it was more as if I just awakened and knew his name. This may not mean anything at all, but I have never known anyone by this name and I am curious about why I would have dreamed this.

The name was [redacted]

b6
b7C

I have followed this story in the news, but have never really thought a lot about it. I cannot even recall where it happened.

I am just curious about this and whether this could be true. I do believe that dreams are sometimes trying to tell us things.

If you could check this out without too much trouble, I would appreciate it and I would also appreciate your letting me know what your findings are. It would satisfy my curiosity.

Thanking you, I am,

December 7, 1981

To the Federal Bureau of Investigation

Because of things I have observed I believe that [redacted] retired [redacted] of the United States Coast Guard, is the the person who called himself D.B. Cooper and hijacked a plane in 1971.

In 1969 to 1971, [redacted] was [redacted] for a company called [redacted] in Everett, Wa. I was a [redacted] for the company. Bad times came and they couldn't pay me or their people. They were going broke! [redacted] had guarenteed his partners that they wouldn't lose their money invested.

I was working in a basement, finishing it out, and overheard this plot. [redacted] and two other men were asking [redacted] what he was going to do as they had lost all their money. He started explaining that he was going to Hijack a 727 in Portland (so people would think he lived there) and make them fly to Seattle, where he would show a bomb. He said he was going to ask for $200,000 and four parachutes. He also said he would make them fly with 15 degrees flaps so they would be so busy they couldn't stop him. He explained he would bail out the emergency shoot on a stormy night so they couldn't follow him. [redacted] said he would help and meet [redacted] in the mountains.

About a month later, [redacted] and his wife bought a [redacted]. They called it their get-a-away car.

One day he asked me to [redacted]

[redacted] I did. When they returned He asked me [redacted]

[redacted] I told him what I knew [redacted]

He asked if [redacted] I told him if it [redacted]

[redacted], it could. The next day he said [redacted]

[redacted] I told him I [redacted]

[redacted] I also told him that [redacted] had some. [redacted] went to him and [redacted]

One day a guy bailed out of a plane over our job. [redacted]

[redacted] He said [redacted] and I did. [redacted]

[redacted] Later [redacted] said some guy hurt his leg. The next monday, [redacted] asked

[redacted] what he was doing taking jumping lessons. He had seen [redacted] taking skydiving lessons from a guy in Snohomish Airport. [redacted] said He had gotten interested because it was fun. The money had gotten slower, we had not been paid in six weeks. [redacted] felt bad about it. He said we would get paid from the last draw. When the time came for the last draw the bank had taken out their interest and there was no money to pay us with. [redacted] was hurt, He said, [redacted]

[redacted] was a person that hated to walk. He rode a motorcycle arount the housing tract. Toward the end he had started walking everywhere he went.

I asked him why and he said [redacted] He also went on a [redacted] [redacted] He had always worn a crew cut and he let his hair grow out.

He started smoking. I aksed him why. He said, "[redacted]

[redacted] One day he asked me [redacted] I said I didn't know.

But, I thought that [redacted] I came to the office one day and [redacted] had a black suit over a thermal suit. He asked his wife if it showed. [redacted] He said he'd [redacted]

He was smoking. I said what are you doing this for. His reply was, [redacted] They are [redacted] I told him [redacted] He laughed.

[redacted] would drive to different parts of town and try to talk to each other on their walkie talkies they had gotten. [redacted]

[redacted] I overheard a talk from [redacted] about a sky diver who hit his target from 7500 ft. [redacted] asked him at what speed and [redacted] said 150 mph. [redacted] said Good.

[redacted] had kept his blue brief case for years, about 20 years, he was very proud of it. [redacted] I was surprised. He had bought a new one. It was black about 2 ft long and 8 in. thick. It had rounded corners. He told me [redacted] when I questioned him about it.

[redacted] would never let anyone take his picture. One day at word he grabbed and broke some guy's camera that was about to take his picture.. The large picture that I saw recently in the newspaper looks like him at the last time I saw him.

[redacted] brought a record player to work and was listening to [redacted] She was studying 8 hours a day. She told me [redacted]

IN 1972, I called [redacted] of Continental Mortgage Inc. (Bunker for Silver Crest Homes) to see if he had a phone number for [redacted] He gave a number in Los Angeles. It was for [redacted] I think.

I called the number and asked for [redacted] When he answered the phone I asked him for a job. He said they [redacted] I asked him why.

He said [redacted] I said, ' [redacted] He went silent and I was puzzled because he couldn't talk. so I said, [redacted] He hung up. The next week I called back and was told that [redacted] had left town and didn't leave any forwarding address.

I am sure that [redacted] did the hijacking job ten years ago. I don't know if you can find him or convict him, but I know for sure that he is D.B. Cooper. I believe he bailed out before he reached the mountains and is living in Mexico and can be found through his retirement checks from the Coast Guard.

Ten years ago, [redacted] was about 48 years old. He had spent 30 years in the Coast Guard. He was a pilot and had flown many large aircraft. He was trained in rescue work of all kinds.

b7c

SA [redacted] advised attorney [redacted] that the FBI would need to know the identity of the individual providing this statement so that possible further information could be obtained. Attorney [redacted] make arrangements for SA [redacted] to meet with his client on 12/14/81.

b6
b7c

On 12/14/81, SA [redacted] met with [redacted] in the office of attorney [redacted] Everett, Washington. [redacted] advised that he resides at [redacted] Everett, Washington, telephone number [redacted] advised that his the individual who prepared the statement indicating that he believes [redacted] to be the individual called D.B. Cooper. [redacted] was asked why he never came forward with this information sooner and he replied that he had been interviewed in 1974, by FBI agent [redacted] regarding this matter. He advised that at that time he was afraid to provide [redacted] with a lot of the detail in this matter as he was afraid of a possible lawsuit. He advised that SA [redacted] had obtained information from an anonymous source that had overheard [redacted] and another individual discussing this matter in a bar. As a result of this anonymous source providing this information [redacted] was contacted by the FBI.

Legend of D.B. Cooper still alive after 10 years

SEATTLE (AP) — D.B. Cooper, who jumped into legend by jumping out of the back of a jetliner and vanishing with $200,000, probably was an aging, trembling crook with nothing left to lose, says the man who tracked the myth for a decade.

Dressed only in a dark business suit, white shirt, narrow tie and loafers, Cooper disappeared literally into thin air the night of Nov. 24, 1971, somewhere over southwest Washington. He parachuted out the back of a Northwest Airlines Boeing 727 with 10,000 $20 bills in a bank bag strapped to his body.

He became the first, and only, "successful" parachute skyjacker in American history. His notoriety helped lead to elaborate airport security systems and redesign of the Boeing 727 jetliner so the rear door can't be opened in flight.

"IT'S CONJECTURE, but I think he was a stupid, desperate rascal, a brutal, unscrupulous man who endangered the lives of more than 40 people for money and caused his own death," says Ralph Himmelsbach, the FBI agent assigned to the Cooper case before he retired last year.

"He was very likely an ex-con who was going to make one last, desperate go for the big one," the 56-year-old Himmelsbach said. "If he made it fine. If not, he probably felt he had very little to lose."

The FBI feels Cooper's skeleton lies crumpled in the thick forests of southwest Washington. Conceivably, agents say, Cooper is buried under tons of volcanic ash because 150 square miles of the search area was coated by Mount St. Helens' eruption last year.

But no one can prove Cooper isn't living a smug life of anonymity somewhere, enjoying the profits of his air piracy.

The case remains the FBI's only major unsolved skyjacking — and his disappearing act is celebrated in twangy song, T-shirts, an annual celebration in the tiny town of Ariel, Wash., and a new movie.

TO PUBLICIZE the movie, "The Pursuit of D.B. Cooper," Universal Studios offered $1 million for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Cooper, who's name probably wasn't even Cooper. The studio still has the money.

His start as a folk hero began when a "Dan Cooper" bought a one-way ticket on Northwest Airlines Flight 305 from Portland, Ore., to Seattle.

Moments after takeoff, Cooper handed a stewardess a hand-written note, announcing the skyjacking and demanding $200,000 and four parachutes. He also opened his briefcase and showed her what she later said looked like a bomb.

Instructions were radioed to the ground and, while the plane circled Seattle-Tacoma Airport, money and parachutes were rounded up. Cooper chain-smoked filter-tipped cigarettes and bought and sipped two bourbon-and-water highballs during the negotiations.

In Seattle, the 36 passengers and two stewardesses got off, while one stewardess and three cockpit crewmen stayed aboard. Cooper became fidgety as refueling took too long and told the stewardess, "Let's get this circus on the road."

THE PLANE took off for Reno, Nev., at 7:37 p.m., while a storm raged outside. Cooper was alone in the passenger section and the crew remained in the cockpit. At 8:11 p.m., the crew noticed a drop in cabin pressure, indicating the plane's rear door was opened.

FBI agents who scrambled aboard in Reno found no trace of Cooper — and a legend was born.

In February 1960, an 8-year-old boy picnicking with his family along the Columbia River west of Vancouver, Wash., unearthed packets of rotting $20 bills from the sand, which turned out to be $5,880 of Cooper's loot.

A hunter on a road near Castle Rock found a placard which wind had ripped from the wall of the plane's stairwell when Cooper jumped, Himmelsbach said.

He said Cooper bailed out while the plane was traveling at almost 200 mph at 10,000 feet, where the temperature was minus 7 and the wind chill factor a minus 39 on a raw and stormy night.

COOPER JUMPED with two parachutes — an emergency chute in front that was "by simple, honest error" defective, and a small sport chute in back that would land a novice sky-diver "fast and hard," Himmelsbach said.

He insists the FBI did not plot to sabotage the jump because "we don't have the right to sentence anyone to death and what would have happened if he took a hostage?"

Some people like to think Cooper lives, such as sponsors of the annual "D.B. Cooper Festival" in Ariel, a town of two buildings near where Cooper is thought to have jumped. Once a year hundreds of people crowd into the Ariel Store and Tavern to buy T-shirts, swill beer and trade Cooper theories.

"I think he got away because they didn't find anything but the money and who's to say he didn't drop it to lead them off the trail," says Laural Fisher, who owns the store-tavern with her husband, Dave, president of the D.B. Cooper Fan Club.

Who's to say, indeed?

After 10 years of searching, "We know 1,000 people who he isn't and 1,000 places where he didn't land," says Dave Hill, FBI spokesman in Seattle.

Dear [REDACTED]

My purpose in writing is two-fold.

First, a while ago a client of mine wrote me a letter regarding an acquaintance of hers, [REDACTED] alias [REDACTED] who apparently could have been involved in the Northwest Air Lines robbery in 1971. Rather than synopsizing her information I have included a photo copy thereof. Her observations are interesting and I can think of no other way of informally inquiring into their validity than through your office.

b6
b7C

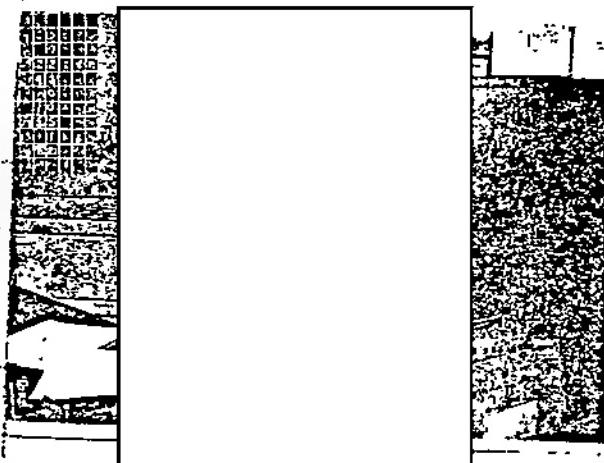

I believe that she is interested in finding out if a reward is available, assuming her information is correct. Naturally this is one reason for the confidentiality of my request, other than the obvious potential civil liabilities.

The other matter I am interested in is the purchase of the Nicoll-Sill House, otherwise known as the Bethlehem House, an historic 1735 structure located in the Town of Bethlehem. Since the structure is on the National Historic Register, it is entitled to a 25% first year investment tax credit to persons buying into a limited partnership for the purpose of purchase and restoration. Additionally, limited partners would be entitled to a proportionate share of the 15-year depreciation available to historic structures under the new tax act, and also a share of the deductions available through the conveyance of a facade easement, by the limited partners, to the Town of Bethlehem. Losses also would be deductible. For example, an investment of $20,000. would yield during tax year 1982 a $5,000. tax credit as a start, and, depending upon the total amount invested in the structure (probably $60,000.), a significant depreciation number. If I can secure an appropriate appraisal stating that the highest and best use of the site is for light industrial purposes, the value of the facade easement (which would limit the building's use substantially) becomes readily apparent. The 5 acre site is adjacent to the Town

The Texas house in which he now lives has been newly constructed within the last 3-4 years. From the blueprints shown us and pictures of the landscaping, the cost must have been well into six figures.

Reward offered for D.B. Cooper

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — An attorney from Modesto, Calif., with a taste for adventure is launching a search for the body of 1971 skyjacker D.B. Cooper.

Richard Tosaw, 56, is offering a $25,000 reward to anyone who can produce Cooper's remains. Tosaw will be in Vancouver on Thursday to begin organizing a search for the remains of the nation's most famous skyjacker.

The search is planned for area forests this summer.

Cooper parachuted from a Northwest Boeing 727 jetliner on Nov. 24, 1971, with $200,000 he extorted from the airline.

The Californian has created Research Publishing Co. to market a book on his quest. The preferred title is, "I Found D.B. Cooper," but Tosaw said "My Search For D.B. Cooper" will have to do if his search is unsuccessful.

He has placed classified ads in Northwest newspapers reading: "$25,000 reward for the finding and delivery to me of the hijacker D.B. Cooper, whether dead or alive, offered good until July 1, 1982."

Asked if he had $25,000 in the bank to offer as a reward, Tosaw said, "I've got more than a million, actually."

The Modesto Bee newspaper confirmed Tosaw is a long-time attorney there and a one-time FBI agent, believed to have extensive real estate holdings.

Tosaw said he left the FBI in 1955 for law, but now has time to devote to mysteries like the Cooper case. "I've always been interested in things like that," he said. "Things like treasure hunting. I think most people are."

Tosaw said that news stories and a movie about Cooper, coinciding with the 10th anniversary of his jump, drew his interest. After preliminary research, he said, "I'm sure he (Cooper) died in the attempt" and thinks the body must be somewhere in the surrounding hills. "The odds are he's still there."

He has asked for the FBI file on Cooper.

Ralph Himmelsbach, the FBI agent who worked longest on the Cooper case and now retired, said in November he believes Cooper probably landed somewhere in the Washougal River basin. He speculates that a packet of the ransom money found in 1980 on a sandy beach west of Vancouver was probably washed down to the Columbia River in later spring floods.

Comparison of the enclosed driver's license photograph does not disclose any marked resemblance to the artist's conception drawing of "D.B. Cooper".

On 1/25/82, [redacted] California, telephone number [redacted] was contacted relative to the information furnished in his letter to the Seattle Office referred to above. [redacted] stated that he was prompted to write the letter after viewing an "In Search Of" episode on television concerning "D.B. Cooper" in the captioned hijacking. In [redacted] estimation, the artist's conception drawing of "Cooper" reminded him of Clemens. He had no other reason than this believed resemblance to consider Clemens a suspect in the captioned matter, but believed that Clemens was a retired airline pilot, although he did not know for which airlines Clemens had flown. Clemens had never [redacted] of any paratrooper-type experience and was fairly tight-lipped regarding his personal life. [redacted] believed that this could be accounted for, possibly by the fact that Clemens was in apparently failing health due to a terminal disease resulting ultimately in his death.

Other than the above, [redacted] was able to furnish no information other than that contained in his original letter, indicating any additional reason why Clemens should be considered a possible suspect in this case.

The enclosed photograph is being forwarded to Seattle for possible display to witnesses in this matter. No further investigation regarding Clemens is contemplated at San Diego unless requested by Seattle.

Five riders find bag, bones near Proebstel

Bones, a black and red bag and a torn $1 bill were found by five persons riding horses on Green Mountain Tuesday.

The bones included rib and spinal bones, but no skull. The Proebstel-area couple who reported the find to the Clark County Sheriff's Office could not tell if the bones were that of a human. Deputies were being led to the spot on horseback today.

The bag was found about 100 yards from the bones, one of the riders said. Something was written on it, but she did not remember what.

She found the $1 bill, torn in four equal pieces, shortly before coming on the bones, she said.

Three other persons were on the ride when the bones were spotted in the Proebstel area near Green Mountain, about 10 miles east of Vancouver.

Another rider said the bag looked like an airline bag. It had the name of an airline written on it, but he could not recall which, he said.

The possibility was raised that the bones could be those of the elusive "D.B. Cooper," who hijacked a Northwest Orient Airlines jet in Seattle Nov. 24, 1971. He parachuted out with $200,000 somewhere over Southwest Washington. He carried a small briefcase or attache case.

The money consisted of 10,000 $20 bills wrapped in a parachute canopy.

The Vancouver FBI agent in charge, John Gordon, said the skimpy information was not enough for him to tell whether his agency is interested in the bones. He said he was keeping in touch with the sheriff's office regarding the case and would wait to see what else deputies turned up today.

RE: Suspect Dr. JAMES A. ROMAN(deceased)

Re Seattle memo of SA [redacted] 3/28/82.

b6
b7C

On 4/13/82 and 4/21/82, [redacted], Office of Special Investigations, Department of Social and Health Services, 500 W. 8th Street, Vancouver, Wash. advised he had no new or pertinent information concerning Dr. ROMAN and had been unsuccessful in locating a photo of ROMAN.

On 5/20/82, contact was attempted with [redacted], supra, with negative results as he was not available.

b6
b7C

On 5/25/82, contact was made with [redacted] [redacted] who was contacted at her place of employment, Vocational Rehabilitation, Department of Social and Health Services, Vancouver, Wash., advised she had been [redacted] and recalled that the D.B. Cooper hi-jacking took place the night before Thanksgiving of that year. She stated [redacted] at least a portion of time between 3:00 pm and 10:00 pm the day before Thanksgiving. She advised ROMAN did not smoke in 1971, had no parachuting experience to her knowledge, and made no flights between Portland and Seattle to her knowledge.

b6
b7C

[redacted] indicated ROMAN was born Oct. 9, 1927. After viewing the artist's conception of D.B. Cooper, she stated ROMAN looked nothing like the conception.

b6
b7C

[redacted] said she had no reason to protect ROMAN inasmuch as [redacted] by virtue of him killing his present wife and then committing suicide. She said that if she had any information relative to ROMAN's involvement with the D.B. Cooper hi-jacking, she would provide it to the FBI.

b6
b7C

Based on the above information, it is suggested that Dr. JAMES A. ROMAN no longer be considered a suspect in this matter.
